

Family Fun on Father's Day!

Father's Day, Sunday June 20th to be exact, will be here before you know it! This year, with all the ups and downs that our families have faced, let's surprise that special dad or father figure in our lives with something he truly wants - the gift of time together and making some great memories.

Here a list of activities for all kinds of fathers out there—foodie dads, wine lovers, outdoorsy dads, and more!

1. Treat Dad to a BBQ Cook-Out

Although your Dad may be King of the Grill, or Grill Master in your house, perhaps this is the year that you show him all that you have learned and you can let him sit back and you can cook for him this year! (if he's willing that is...)

2. Host an At-Home Wine or Beer Tasting

Calling all wine and beer-loving dads. Head to your local liquor store and pick 3-5 wines or beers that you think your Dad would love. Create "Score cards" and an appetizer platter to go along with it. This idea can also be done in a COVID-19 friendly way. Buy Dad his own supply, then everyone else can stock up on their own, and then "host" the party over a video call.

3. Play Backyard Games

I don't know about you, but my family loves outdoor games. If a backyard isn't an option, try walk to a nearby park to enjoy games, like bocce, badminton, volleyball, or croquet. Games tap into Dad's competitive side, plus it's a great way to get active before a big Father's Day cookout!

4. Make Breakfast Together

Now, we know that it's Dad's turn to lay in bed and relax, but perhaps making breakfast with the family can also make a great memory. With the help of some little hands, breakfast making can be a totally different experience. If you turn on some music, get some bacon sizzling, it can be an egg-cellent start to the day!

5. Take a Hike!

Whether it be a nice flat hike with the little ones or an escape to a nearby mountain, getting some much-needed serenity and nature-filled relaxation is the perfect gift for any outdoorsy dad.
